

A month of better service.

The September pilot simplified enquiry handling across three service teams. Clearer routing and a shared knowledge base helped customers reach the right support sooner. The figures below are fictional sample data.

4.6 / SATISFACTION

What changed

Routine enquiries moved into guided self-service. Complex requests kept a clear route to an adviser, with the conversation context attached. Teams reviewed unanswered questions every Friday.

What we learned

The most frequent friction was unclear document requirements. Customers completed requests more confidently when shown an example and a short checklist. Evening demand remained higher than expected.

Next month: three priorities

- 01 Rewrite the five most-used document checklists.
- 02 Test evening callback slots with the support team.
- 03 Review unresolved requests weekly and report the outcome.

DECISION REQUESTED

Approve a four-week follow-up pilot with a named owner for each priority.
